ADVANCE IN BREADSTUFFS.

Consols 93 3-4 a 7-8.

The United States mail steamer Baltic sailed from Liverpool at 11 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, the 17th inst., and arrived at this port yesterday morning.

The Africa arrived at Liverpool o'clock morning of Sunday, the 14th.

Money had been in active demand, particularly with a view to be protected against contingencies. Hence the rates of discount had advanced this week. The actual pressure was not, however, so severe practically as in appearance. Rates were uniform at the maximum in Lombard-street, while the applications at the Bank were numerous. On the Stock Exchange the money had been active. Foreign securities had been all heavy, and most of them further declined. Railway shares had fluctuated, but the transactions had not been numerous. Consols, although generally more active, were still languid, and there was a general disposition to wait for the dawn of the money market before contracting engagements of any magnitude.

A demonstration of welcome to John Frost, the Chartist, was made in London the 15th. A procession moved along the streets to Primrose Hill, where the meeting was constituted. Ernest Jones occupied the Chair. The exercises commenced by the singing of a democratic ode to the air of "God save the Queen," after which various speakers addressed the assemblage. The proceedings were characterized by good order and moderation. About 10,000 persons were present.

The London Times, in a leading article, ridicules the chartist demonstration, calls it a complete failure, and requests the attention of its respected friend King Bomba to the fact that, in the capital of Great Britain, a set of foolish fanatics are at full liberty to parade the streets and prate at their will about the destruction of our religious and political superstitions.

A meeting of the National Sunday League was held in St. Martin's Hall, London, and a resolution adopted that the music in the parks of the metropolis and in the towns of the Kingdom on Sundays has been productive of great moral good.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says:

"As yet no preparations are making for the Congress to be held at Paris this Winter, and which is to consist of the second representatives who assisted at the Congress last Spring; but there appears to be no doubt that such a meeting will be held, with a view to settle, with the least possible delay, questions arising out of the treaty of Paris."

In reference to the rumors that have been so long afloat concerning the Emperor's health, the Independance says:

"The Emperor, as to whose health so many exaggerated and even ridiculous reports are in circulation, is very well. There is, in fact, nothing the matter with him, and none unbearable long journeys are in store for him, for he is to cross St. Hombert, and which will take place in the course of next month."

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News writes:

"I have just learned a piece of news which may perhaps be considered very important. The Prussian Ambassador, Count de Hatzfeldt, accompanied by his lady, left Paris this morning for Biarritz where it is said they are to stay a week. This looks very like an entente cordiale between the French Emperor and the King of Prussia on the subject of Neufchâtel.

In the Paris Correspondence of the London Post we find the following paragraph:

"I believe I may inform you that the French and English Governments are under the impression that the conduct of the King of Naples will oblige them to withdraw the members of their respective missions, and break off all diplomatic relations. At the present moment I am assured Austria is using every effort to prevent such a proceeding, but the next few days must, I now think, bring this long-pending question to a crisis.

The Cologne Gazette states that the new collective note which the Western Powers intend sending to the King of Naples, and which, it is even said, has already been forwarded, dwells on the necessity of carrying out the following four points: 1. Suppression of the arbitrary authority of the police and of punishments arbitrarily inflicted by that body. 2. An amelioration in the political administration, and a modification in the exercise of justice in what relates to judicial proceedings previously to trial. 3. The creation of credit establishments, so as to give an impetus to commerce and manufactures. 4. Permission to all emigrants and exiles to return to their country, and their restoration to their civil rights and former position, provided they sign an act of submission.

The affair in Kabylia, Algeria, which took place on the 2d inst., is detailed in a report to the French Secretary of War. The crops of the French had been gathered, and were heaped up around the village of Dra-el-Misam, when 6,000 Kabyles came down to burn them. The French had there but a native detachment, one battalion of the 45th regiment, and a squadron of Chasseurs d'Afrique. The natives were put forward in advance and the regulars remained in concealment. The Kabyles came on furiously and drove back the native contingent, but suddenly found themselves charged with the bayonet by the battalion of infantry. Notwithstanding the superiority of discipline and arms on the side of the French the great disparity of numbers rendered the contest severe and its result, for a time, doubtful, until the Chasseurs d'Afrique charged finally with great effect, and the enemy fled. On the 5th the mountaineers came down again, but they had not reckoned on the considerable reinforcements the French had received in the interval, and they were driven back with loss. It is said that an expedition against the Kabyles will at once take place. Any operations that the French may have contemplated against the Riff pirates are for the present postponed.

It is stated that Gonzales Bravo is to be appointed Minister of Spain at Washington.

There is nothing new politically from Spain.

Accounts from the Canary Islands mention that the state of siege was proclaimed there on the 9th, on receipt of orders to that effect from the home Government.

The Spanish Government had received dispatches from the Captain-General of Cuba, which tend to enjoy tranquillity, and that the military [illegible] improved.

The Galignani journal announces that the Federal Council had replied to the note presented to it by the Prussian representative, (M. de Sydow,) in reference to Neufchâtel, in which note the Prussian Government reserved its right of sovereignty over the Canton. In reply, the Federal Council declares that it cannot admit the right claimed by Prussia, for the reason already expressed in the negative reply of the Federal Directory of the 1st and 6th of March, 1849, and the Council expresses regret that events, in every way deplorable, should have given a motive for the renewal of the protest. According to the same journal, M. de Sydow had an interview with M. Scherrer, President of the Federal Council, from whom he demanded that the prisoners should be treated with kindness, and that the judicial inquiry and trial should not be too hastily conducted, in such a course might [illegible] still more the distrustful relations of Prussia with the Confederation; and notwithstanding that Prussia [illegible] to which such observations ought to be addressed, since its legislation with respect to political offenses,

THE EMPEROR'S CANOPY.

There is a perceptible movement among the multitude, and turning to the left we come out upon the end of the narrow rampe, or Krasnoie Kriltsa, at which there is placed a dais or canopy, beneath which the Emperor and Empress will march to the Church of the Assumption. [illegible] of gold, embroidered with Imperial eagles, and is held up by 16 wands of silver gilt, ornamented with yellow, black, and white shields. On the imaginary ovals embroidered the Emperor's cipher, surmounted by a crown, surrounded with the order of St. Andrew. It is surmounted with 16 standards of embroidered cloth of gold, and is embroidered with the arms of the Empire, as well as those of Kazan, Astrakhan, Poland, Siberia, of Taurida, Kiief, Vladimir, Novgorod, Finland, and other provinces. All these and many more details do I quote on the authority of the great work by the Master of Ceremonies, for indeed to me all is gold that glitters, and in the general impression produced by the sight of such things one ransacks the memory in vain for the components parts which pleased them. What a scene there is in the court below. An assemblage of parasols, bonnets, helmets, coats, shawls, all of the gayest hues. At the foot of the staircase there is one large raised stand full of people—there is also a gallery on the right-hand side from the Palace to the Church, full of people—before us all the Church belfries are full of people, and the Court is thronged also. There are two streams of people, in uniforms and Court dresses, pouring up and down from the Palace to the Court. By the dais there is for the present only an escort of the Grenadiers à Cheval, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel FABBRAWA, a nephew of our stout Admiral who commanded the sailing squadron at the great naval review at Spithead some years ago. At present the silver batons are upheld by private soldiers only, and they evidently regard it as a most solemn and sacred affair. Every one who passes beneath the dais to and fro uncovers his head.

THE PALACE AGAIN.

Passing through the crowd along the upper landing, over a rich scarlet cloth, we come again to the door by which we first entered the Palace. The old Grenadiers are still standing as rigid and steady as before. Let us go in again, and turn to the right, passing between a wall of soldiers. Let us enter the banqueting-hall. Surely here are the richest of the world! Such a glare of gold plate, such a wild profusion of goblets, vases, cups, salvers, heaped on tables, massed on sideboards or carved stands along the walls of this glittering room! This is the Granovitaya Palata, the Hall of the Ancient Tsars, or as the Russians spell the word in French. Can it be described? Assuredly not by the pen, nor by the pencil of any artist but one who can dip his brush in the hues of the rainbow. The low, many-arched roof of the hall is sustained by a huge square pillar in the centre, round which is placed a platform with receding ledges to the height of nine or ten feet, each ledge groaning with ancient vases and dishes in gold and silver. Some of these are of the quaintest form and curious workmanship—models of old castles and palaces, strange animals, battle-pieces, birds—richly worked in past centuries by forgotten descendants of TUBAL CAIN, and each a museum in itself. On the right hand of the hall, on entering, there is a buffet which seems crushed beneath the masses of gold vessels upon it, each a study, but enriched above all by the grand cup from BRYULLOFF'S own hand, for which Russia paid the sum of £10,000 sterling. On the left there is an estrade for the orchestra and for the singers, among whom are LABLACHE, DURESNIL, DUBOIS, CALZOLARI and TAGLIAFICO. It is covered with ermine-tufted purple velvet, with gold fringes and borders.

THE THRONE.

The Imperial throne is placed at the end of the room, opposite the buffet on the right hand side. Three steps, covered with gold embroidered purple velvet, lead to the platform on which the throne is placed. Above there is a dais, with an imperial of cloth of gold, covered with imperial eagles, with a crown in the centre on a cushion of velvet and cloth of gold, with fringes and acorns of gold, edged with yellow, black and white. The edge of the top of the dais is carved and gilt, and in the centre is a shield of the Imperial cypher, with the Imperial crown above, encompassed by the collar of the order of St. Andrew. On each side are smaller shields, with the collar of St. Andrew around them, richly embroidered, and all three are draped with Imperial standards. At the ends of the top of the dais there are aigrettes of ostrich plumes, dyed yellow, white and black. Beneath, as the back of the throne, is displayed the Imperial mantle of ermine, with the arms of the Empire in a golden border in the centre, and the Imperial cypher profusely embroidered on it. The edges of the steps of the platform are ornamented with large salvers and goblets of gold, on pedestals of malachite and gold; the three ancient thrones of the Czars are placed beneath the dais, and on the left there is a table for the crown, sceptre and globe, covered with crimson velvet embroidered with gold, and a cloth of gold beneath it. There is a table at the step to the platform, which is to be borne up to the throne when the banquet commences by three of the High Chamberlains of the Empire. On the left of the pillar are placed two tables, extending the whole length of the room for the guests. These are weighed down, likewise, with gold and silver plates, goblets, plateaux, epergnes and salvers. The chairs of white and gold, with crimson velvet seats, are placed at the left sides of the tables only, so that all the guests will have their faces turned towards their Majesties. Such are the glories of the banqueting-room of the Czar.

THE OUTER COURT OF THE KREMLIN.

If you do not wish to be as miserable as Midas come forth into the fresh air, and get a look at the pure blue sky, which is shining with Heaven's own brightness. Descend the scarlet staircase between files of the Chevalier Guard, the Garde à Cheval, the Cuirassiers of the Guard, the Grenadiers of the Guard—all now dismounted and forming a fence bristling with sabres between the scarlet cloth and the nobility. Pass by the Church of the Assumption, and out under the archway of the outer court of the Kremlin,—the scarlet cloth is still beneath our feet, and the raised estrade on which the Emperor walks after leaving the church is carried round outside into the outer court close to the galleries erected for the occasion till it reaches the inner court by the archway at the south-eastern extremity. This estrade is protected by a railing, and at each side there is a wall of soldiers, part of which—a detachment of the Lancers of the Guard—is commanded by Major HALL, who is descended from an English family. And here I may mention that among the Russian officers I have met there are bearers of the names of RAMSAY, GRAHAM, BELL, DOUGLASS, &c. The first—who is the descendant of an old Scottish family, bearing the name of DALHOUSIE—is one of the ablest generals of the service, and was specially engaged in defence of Finland; the others are most likely the representatives of those adventurous soldiers and sailors of fortune who flocked from Scotland to lead the battalions of Northern Europe to victory by their discipline, valor, and sagacity. The foreign ambassadors and ministers who assembled at the palace of M. DE MOUSY, at 8 o'clock, will descend from their carriages at the northern angle of this outer estrade.

THE FRENCH AMBASSADOR.

Just a minute or two before 9 o'clock there is a great commotion among the people, who are closely packed in this outer court, and the gendarmes riding quietly through them make a lane for the first carriage of the French Embassy. It comes up right gorgeously—running footmen, bewigged coachman, grand chasseur,—a regular glass coach, all gold hangings; the horses and harness are unexceptionable, but it is rather startling to hear in the Kremlin a vigorous interpellation addressed from the dignitary on the box to the leading pole-leader, "Now then Bill! why the ——— don't you leave the cases 'ads halone?" There ply is lost in the Russian cries of attention along the line as Count DE MOUSY descends from his carriage and steps on the estrade, where he is received by a High Chamberlain in waiting. His Excellency is dressed de rigueur, and is really a well-appointed "fine looking gentleman," as our great Pendennis would say. Some of his suite have arrived on horseback, and the other carriages of the embassy are rolling up into the shade by the splendor of their chiefs. He is attended by M. BAUDIN, first Secretary; Vicomte L'ESTRIS, second Secretary; Vicomte SIMON, Marquis DE RIVIRIS, Marquis DE SAYES, Count JOACHIM MURAT, Comte DE LAVALETTE, le Duc de CHAUDRON, [illegible] Comte D'HUMBERSETS, Gen. TERRIOT, (Artillery of the Guard,) Gen. FIOSSARD, (Engineers,) Gen. DAMOU, (Infantry,) Col. BELLE, (old Major,) all Crimeans; Prince DE BARENDOR, (Hussars,) Marquis DE GALLIFET, Comte D'ESPEYRAN, and M. DE FIQUEMILA, officers of cavalry and staff, all in full uniform. They proceed along the scarlet cloth to the cathedral, where they take the places assigned to them.

THE ENGLISH AMBASSADOR.

The next carriage, which is not so showy, but is in other respects, at least, as good as the Count's coach, is that of the English Ambassador, who, with the Countess GRANVILLE, descend, are received by the Chamberlain, and in the course enter the Cathedral.

Lord GRANVILLE is dressed in the Windsor uniform, and his wife, who is all our eyes is dressed with great richness and taste, is quite glorious with diamonds. The person who [illegible] is the wife of the Minister Plenipotentiary of a great dome [illegible] Lord Granville, the Earl of LONGUEVILLE, the Hon. Arthur HARDINGE, the Hon. Lord GRANVILLE'S brother and Lady MARGARET LEVESON-GOWER, Lord WARD, and [illegible] Queen's household, and the Princess old [illegible] of Russia, and Lady Emma Peel and Lord Ashburton, Lord Alexander, the Hon. Francis Pelham,

Letter from Gen. Fremont—Interesting Correspondence.

We find in the California Chronicle the following interesting correspondence which was had in 1849, with Col. Fremont, brought to incidents of his stay in California, which are still made topics of remark:

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Dec. 11, 1849.

DEAR SIR: Your name has been long before the people of California as a candidate for the United States Senate, and, as I understand, still remains in your election, and takes the liberty of asking of you information on certain points which I discover to be much agitated by some who are not your friends. Are you a Whig? Are you a Democrat? Are you a member of any other political party? What are your views in relation to an overland communication by Railroad or otherwise, from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and through the territory of the United States? What is the true history and nature of your title to a certain tract of land which you are said to claim on the Mariposa River? What have you done, and what do you propose to do, to establish that claim? I

Within which you are said to have rendered to run a boundary line called for by a late treaty with Mexico? Was that appointment solicited by yourself or your friends, and have you accepted it, and if not, how long did you hold it under consideration?

What was the real nature of the transaction with D. Eugenio de Celis, concerning which certain publications were some time since made in the newspapers of this place and of some of the Eastern States? On all these matters I would respectfully submit that as full an answer as this short notice will allow is due to your friends and supporters, and that in regard to your political principles, a declaration would come from you with peculiar grace, seeing that your occupation, honorable as they have been to, and serviceable to, your country, have not been of a character to call for an expression of your opinions on matters of Government, and that your friends, though well pleased themselves of your acceptability, are yet daily met with the question, "How do you know that Mr. Fremont is a Democrat, and how long has he been one?" Yours, &c., JACOB E. SNYDER.

J. C. FREMONT, Esq.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Dec. 11, 1849.

MY DEAR SIR: I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter to-day, and to make you my kind thanks for the gratification I find in being enabled to make some reply to the vague accusations in circulation against me.

I presume it will be a sufficient answer to your first question simply to state that by association, feeling, principle and education I am thoroughly a Democrat; and without entering into any discussion of the questions at issue between the two great parties, I have only further to say, that I adhere to the great principles of the Democratic Party as they are understood on this and the other side of the Continent.

I am strongly in favor of a central, national railroad from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean. Recent events have converted the vague desire for that work into an organized movement throughout the great body of our fellow-citizens in the United States, and in common with them I am warmly in favor of its immediate commencement and speedy completion. The changes which it will operate throughout the Pacific Ocean and Eastern Asia—commingling together the European, American and Asiatic races—spreading indefinitely, religious, social and political improvement—characterize it as the great enterprise of the age, and a great question proposed for the solution of the American people. There never has been presented an enterprise so calculated to draw together in its support all classes of society, and the perpetual and always increasing benefits which it will confer upon the human race, in addition to the weighty national considerations, military, political and commercial, which more immediately concern us, call upon us for immediate and efficient action. Ardently in favor of the work, it follows of course that I am entirely satisfied of its practicability, and believe fully in its ultimate and speedy construction. Many years of labor and exploration of the interior of our continent and along a great part of the way the road will necessarily pass, have conclusively satisfied me not only of its entire practicability, but of extraordinary advantages offered to its construction. A late journey across the continent from the frontier of Missouri was solely directed to a examination of the country in reference to the railroad communication, and was undertaken in the season of Winter in order that all the obstacles which could exist to the construction of the road might be known and fully determined. The result was entirely satisfactory. It convinced me that neither the snow of Winter nor the mountain ranges were obstacles in the way of the road, and furnished me with a far better line than I had previously known, where, four hundred miles of Missouri along the line of Kansas river, four hundred miles of rich and wooded country, well adapted to settlement, by the upper waters of the Arkansas into and through the rugged mountains in which they lies, to the valley which lies around the head waters of the Great Del Norte—the profile of the route presents a regularly ascending plain, without a perceptible inequality to break the uniformity of its surface. Lying between the 38th and 39th parallel of latitude—commencing on the frontier of Missouri at the 94th and ending in the Del Norte valley in the 36th—the route presents a comparatively straight line, running for the greater part of the way through a country capable of settlement and cultivation, and passing through the Arkansas chain (one of the most rugged in the Rocky Mountain ranges) by a passage impassible grade, and in every respect one of the best with which I am acquainted in those difficult mountains. Beyond the Del Norte the route remains yet to be explored, well known frontiers reliable information to afford through the mountains which separate the valley of the Del Norte and Colorado, an excellent pass, traveled by Mexicans at all seasons of the year, which gives every reason for believing that the character of the country is equally favorable. Its further progress would, carry it by the southern extremity of the country now occupied by the people of Deseret, and thence by the line of the Humboldt River around into the head of the lower Sacramento valley by a pass in the Sierra Nevada but little known. The general level of the great basin. Such a location would be entirely practicable, passing by the northern edge of the New-Mexican settlements, going through the southern part of the Mormon, and branching into Oregon from the confines of California.

Some months since, in a conversation with General Smith, I had the honor to propose this plan for the location of the road. I further indicated to him the existence of this favorable way, and pass from the Humboldt River into the head of the lower Sacramento valley. Gen. Smith decided immediately to send an exploring party to examine the route, and requested me to send him a letter recapitulating the information, in order, as he had the kindness to say, that any doubt which might hereafter belong to the origin of the line, should cease to rise. The expedition was immediately sent, and although it terminated in the death of the gallant officer who commanded it, I am informed that his journal and sketches fully establish, as far as he went, the practicability of the road.

You are aware that among the indefinite objections which have been raised against me, are some of a sectional character. Such objections, I think, may be fairly met with the statement above.

The "Mariposa claim" is a tract of land ten leagues in extent, lying upon a creek of the same name in the San Joaquin valley. It was purchased for me by M. Talvaro, in the beginning of 1847, and taken by agreement with the battalion in the South, from D. Juan B. Alvarado, to whom it had been granted in consideration of his public services. Mr. Alvarado paid for it $1,000. I had never seen the place, and had never heard of its existence or value. The purchase was made before California was ceded to the United States, and long before any gold had been discovered. I had always intended to make my home in the country, if possible, and for the purpose desired a foothold in it. On my return to the country in the present year, I visited the place in company with Dr. Cogswell, Mr. Bear, and several others, and

Within which you are said to have rendered to run a boundary line called for by a late treaty with Mexico? Was that appointment solicited by yourself or your friends, and have you accepted it, and if not, how long did you hold it under consideration?

What was the real nature of the transaction with D. Eugenio de Celis, concerning which certain publications were some time since made in the newspapers of this place and of some of the Eastern States? On all these matters I would respectfully submit that as full an answer as this short notice will allow is due to your friends and supporters, and that in regard to your political principles, a declaration would come from you with peculiar grace, seeing that your occupation, honorable as they have been to, and serviceable to, your country, have not been of a character to call for an expression of your opinions on matters of Government, and that your friends, though well pleased themselves of your acceptability, are yet daily met with the question, "How do you know that Mr. Fremont is a Democrat, and how long has he been one?" Yours, &c., JACOB E. SNYDER.

J. C. FREMONT, Esq.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Dec. 11, 1849.

MY DEAR SIR: I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter to-day, and to make you my kind thanks for the gratification I find in being enabled to make some reply to the vague accusations in circulation against me.

I presume it will be a sufficient answer to your first question simply to state that by association, feeling, principle and education I am thoroughly a Democrat; and without entering into any discussion of the questions at issue between the two great parties, I have only further to say, that I adhere to the great principles of the Democratic Party as they are understood on this and the other side of the Continent.

I am strongly in favor of a central, national railroad from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean. Recent events have converted the vague desire for that work into an organized movement throughout the great body of our fellow-citizens in the United States, and in common with them I am warmly in favor of its immediate commencement and speedy completion. The changes which it will confer upon our whole country—the changes which it will operate throughout the Pacific Ocean and Eastern Asia—commingling together the European, American and Asiatic races—spreading indefinitely, religious, social and political improvement—characterize it as the great enterprise of the age, and a great question proposed for the solution of the American people. There never has been presented an enterprise so calculated to draw together in its support all classes of society, and the perpetual and always increasing benefits which it will confer upon the human race, in addition to the weighty national considerations, military, political and commercial, which more immediately concern us, call upon us for immediate and efficient action. Ardently in favor of the work, it follows of course that I am entirely satisfied of its practicability, and believe fully in its ultimate and speedy construction. Many years of labor and exploration of the interior of our continent and along a great part of the way the road will necessarily pass, have conclusively satisfied me not only of its entire practicability, but of extraordinary advantages offered to its construction. A late journey across the continent from the frontier of Missouri was solely directed to a examination of the country in reference to the railroad communication, and was undertaken in the season of Winter in order that all the obstacles which could exist to the construction of the road might be known and fully determined. The result was entirely satisfactory. It convinced me that neither the snow of Winter nor the mountain ranges were obstacles in the way of the road, and furnished me with a far better line than I had previously known, where, four hundred miles of Missouri along the line of Kansas river, four hundred miles of rich and wooded country, well adapted to settlement, by the upper waters of the Arkansas into and through the rugged mountains in which they lies, to the valley which lies around the head waters of the Great Del Norte—the profile of the route presents a regularly ascending plain, without a perceptible inequality to break the uniformity of its surface. Lying between the 38th and 39th parallel of latitude—commencing on the frontier of Missouri at the 94th and ending in the Del Norte valley in the 36th—the route presents a comparatively straight line, running for the greater part of the way through a country capable of settlement and cultivation, and passing through the Arkansas chain (one of the most rugged in the Rocky Mountain ranges) by a passage impassible grade, and in every respect one of the best with which I am acquainted in those difficult mountains. Beyond the Del Norte the route remains yet to be explored, well known frontiers reliable information to afford through the mountains which separate the valley of the Del Norte and Colorado, an excellent pass, traveled by Mexicans at all seasons of the year, which gives every reason for believing that the character of the country is equally favorable. Its further progress would, carry it by the southern extremity of the country now occupied by the people of Deseret, and thence by the line of the Humboldt River around into the head of the lower Sacramento valley by a pass in the Sierra Nevada but little known. The general level of the great basin. Such a location would be entirely practicable, passing by the northern edge of the New-Mexican settlements, going through the southern part of the Mormon, and branching into Oregon from the confines of California.

Some months since, in a conversation with General Smith, I had the honor to propose this plan for the location of the road. I further indicated to him the existence of this favorable way, and pass from the Humboldt River into the head of the lower Sacramento valley. Gen. Smith decided immediately to send an exploring party to examine the route, and requested me to send him a letter recapitulating the information, in order, as he had the kindness to say, that any doubt which might hereafter belong to the origin of the line, should cease to rise. The expedition was immediately sent, and although it terminated in the death of the gallant officer who commanded it, I am informed that his journal and sketches fully establish, as far as he went, the practicability of the road.

You are aware that among the indefinite objections which have been raised against me, are some of a sectional character. Such objections, I think, may be fairly met with the statement above.

The "Mariposa claim" is a tract of land ten leagues in extent, lying upon a creek of the same name in the San Joaquin valley. It was purchased for me by M. Talvaro, in the beginning of 1847, and taken by agreement with the battalion in the South, from D. Juan B. Alvarado, to whom it had been granted in consideration of his public services. Mr. Alvarado paid for it $1,000. I had never seen the place, and had never heard of its existence or value. The purchase was made before California was ceded to the United States, and long before any gold had been discovered. I had always intended to make my home in the country, if possible, and for the purpose desired a foothold in it. On my return to the country in the present year, I visited the place in company with Dr. Cogswell, Mr. Bear, and several others, and

From Europe.

[illegible] Baltic, with the [illegible] mail of September 17, [illegible] yesterday morning. Our [illegible] Europe are four days later, but they are of not much importance. Details of the Greek Convention at Moscow are received, and correspondents affirm the pageant to have been on a most extraordinary scale of splendor. After the ceremony was performed, an imposing act was issued, by which an amnesty was extended to the political offenders of 1826 and 1831, and in other respects a foundation has been laid for great practical reforms. From Portugal the news is scanty.—A demonstration to welcome John Frost, the Chartist, took place in London on the 15th inst. According to Chartist authority some ten thousand persons were present, but according to other authorities, among which is that of the Times, the affair was a failure. It is asserted that the Congress will again meet in Paris during the Winter to settle divers questions arising out of the Treaty of Peace. The Emperor [illegible] back to the astonishment of his [illegible] had visited Spain, where he seems to have been welcomed with great enthusiasm. It was current that Gonzales Bravo had been appointed Minister from Spain to [illegible]. No change has taken place in the political aspect of Naples. The report is [illegible] that the Representatives of France and England have received instructions [illegible], in case the King refuses to listen [illegible] Spanish affairs remain in statu quo, and from other parts of Europe there is no intelligence worthy of special [illegible].

Politics and the Pulpit.

It will be observed that the prevalent outcry against the priests intermeddling with politics is raised by the Fillmore press. Of the few remaining papers in this City that decline to utter [illegible] political questions, a friend, who has been at pains to make secret investigations upon the subject, informs us that the editors are personally supporters of Mr. Fillmore. The Express, the sole organ of Fillmoreism in this City, is peculiarly malignant towards any minister who ventures to declare himself on the one absorbing topic of the day, and has [illegible] of the Gospel mission so elevated as to be absolved at its application to any mundane affairs whatever. It has selected the clergyman of one of the most influential congregations in an adjoining city as the object of the most vindictive and blasphemous assaults, upon this transcendental ground. Two or three things are, in this connection, worth recalling.

1. A half-dozen years ago the advocates of Southern views upon the Compromise question—the Slave-owners and Cottonocracy of that day—resulted in nothing half so noisily the mouthpiece testimony of the pulpit in favor of their political ideas. The Express surrounded itself on the Union-saving sermons of Dr. Brems, Spurgeon, Cox, and others, who preached freely on political topics; and much of the popularity of the Compromise Measures, and the confidence felt in their efficacy, efficacy, was undoubtedly owing to the currency thus given to ecclesiastical dicta. Now, when disgusted and alarmed at Mr. Fillmore's abolition sentiments, and the insane and [illegible] dodges of the Cincinnati platform, the pulpit arrays itself on the side of Freedom, and Freedom, the Express and Fillmore say, has no propriety in religion allying itself with politics, and makes war upon the Protestant clergy as vindictively as it does upon the Roman Catholics.

2. Know-Nothingism, of which Mr. Fillmore is the candidate, and the Express the organ, has been remarkable from the earliest dawn of its existence, for thrusting ministers of the gospel into political place. It removed one or more clergymen of this State from the charge of their congregations, and sent them to the Legislature. In New England, every aspirant to a dozen or so Know-Nothing governorships, where the order thought to take place in the administration of political affairs. It was so in every State where Know-Nothingism attained a secondary; and against the criticisms of political opponents who thought proper to censure the novelty, the "American" press has been eloquent and aggressive. The pension and preaching system, directly in contradiction to the present affected scruples of conscience.

3. The Fillmore Party is an organization, whose only avowed principle of coherence is a religious one. It is a party founded on antagonism to a peculiar form of religious faith. By waging relentless war against the ministry of one form of christianity, it compels it to become militant in the arena of politics, in self-defence. It obliges a large and powerful sect to forget its spiritual concerns, in the necessity of protecting itself against political proscription. None but a coward would allege that the ministry of a minister when attacked with [illegible] passed, being physical force to defend himself, or when attacked with political charges, [illegible] defensively. [illegible] highest holiness the whole [illegible] we are to abide to [illegible] ministry is objects to [illegible] field. If it [illegible] to be the case, [illegible] the criticisms of political opponents who thought proper to censure the novelty, the "American" press has been eloquent and aggressive. The pension and preaching system, directly in contradiction to the present affected scruples of conscience.

4. While objecting to the association of religion and politics, the whole staple of speech [illegible] the antipathies upon the Religion of Christ. The same [illegible] preaches against the proscription of the Religion in political affairs, impiously utters the grossest falsehoods touching the religion of a candidate, that deliberate malice and bigotry can devise.

It is one of the difficulties of this political contest, that our opponents have no distinct principles to be controverted. They are, both of them, parties purely negative. While the Republican movement everywhere is for everything that goes to the constitution of a true and permanent Republic, sham Democracy, and sham Americanism shift their positions with the latitude, and refute themselves from different sides of Mason's and Dixon's line. They are only unanimous in opposition to the party of freedom. Hence, instead of arguments to discuss, we have only sophistries to unmask, falsehoods to expose, hypocritical pretensions to dispel, violence to condemn. Our warfare is not with a bold, substantial, valiant, adversary, but, like the Knight of the Fairy Queen, we must contend with the monsters, abortions, and chimeras, which a hidden Archimage conjures up to oppose us. We lay lance in rest against bodiless lies; transfix impish inventions; decapitate blatant errors. And of all such inventions and errors, there is none which more peculiarly characterizes the Christian persecution, than this, which defines politics to be the dreary region of all [illegible] to the Ambassadors of Heaven are proscribed, and whom every one who finds them may slay them. This impious doctrine we have endeavored to confute.

Moon-Struck.

The Richmond Enquirer is quite sure that Fremont's election will bring about disunion. And it thus sets forth what it flatters itself would be the consequences of such a step:

"Her [the North's] numbers now increase nearly half a million a year—ours almost stationary. In event of disunion no more immigrants would go to the North; for we eat of from the South, they could neither get employment, nor food, nor clothes. Immigration would cease, and emigration begin with the panic and rapidity of a "cause qui peut." Her manufactures and operatives would move South (or somewhere) to get employed to manufacture—to get food and custom—ers. The merchants would come South for a market, and the ship-owners for freights. Their very schools would cease as the Southern demand for Northern teachers and Northern learning cease. Disunion will encircle the wealth and population of the South—quickly impoverish and depopulate the North."

Was there ever such senseless gabble as this? How men of intelligence, of education and ability like the editors of the Enquirer, can permit themselves to print such statements, we find it difficult to understand. If the voters of Virginia are ignorant enough to give them credit, their need of teachers, from some quarter or other, is much greater than we had ever ventured to believe. Let us look a little in detail at these assertions.

How do the half million emigrants who come annually into the Northern States from abroad, get their "employment, food or clothes" from the South? They are supported by their labor. As long as that is in demand, they will have no difficulty in procuring all the necessaries of life. Now how is disunion to affect it? This labor is now employed upon the canals and railroads, the houses and farms, in the factories and workshops, of the Free States. It is mainly required for the supply of domestic necessities,—for our internal commerce;—for the comfort and convenience of our people. All these things will be needed just as much after disunion as before. The Enquirer probably does not anticipate that disunion even would paralyze this home life of the Northern States. We should still need railroads and canals to transport the products of the mighty West to market. Our farms would still yield their crops of corn and wheat, and the extension of Free Labor into the Western Territory—the speedy conversion of Missouri into a Free State,—the gradual recession of Slavery before Free Labor in Kentucky and other States, would vastly augment the products that would seek access to the seaboard through Free-State channels of transportation. Thousands of the emigrants themselves would follow up this receding wave of Slavery, and make themselves independent farmers, owners of the soil they cultivate. But, why would they go South, as the Enquirer seems to anticipate? What have they to do there? What reason for going South would then exist which does not now?

But the Enquirer thinks that Northern manufacturers and merchants would of necessity go South for raw material. This is too absurd for serious argument. If the South continues to raise Cotton, she must sell it,—her necessities will be quite as great after disunion as before; and she will sell it, then as now, wherever she can find the best market. The only reason why she sells anything to the North now is, that she finds it profitable to do so. If she should find it less profitable then, the necessity of selling will be none the less imperative. The loss will be her own. It is not so easy as the Enquirer imagines, to extemporize a manufacturing or a commercial system. The South will never see the day when she can establish either, without a radical change in her domestic and social economy. They are incompatible with Slavery; and the existence of Slavery is the reason why the South has never succeeded in establishing manufactures upon a large scale, and why the commerce she once had has died out.

But the crowning absurdity of the Enquirer's article is that Northern schools will cease, as soon as the South has no further need of "Northern teachers." That paper affects to suppose that the demand for teachers at the South is all that keeps Northern schools alive,—that we should have no use for educated men in the Free States if the South should cease to want them for teachers! Even if that were so, we see no immediate prospect of such a contingency. But no one who knows anything of society in the Northern States can for an instant give the slightest weight to such a statement. Education is put to practical uses in every department of industry and activity throughout the Free States;—and so long as intelligence is felt to be a means of power, so long will this continue to be the case.

[illegible] Democratic Convention which met at Montgomery's, in Beekman-street.

Gov. Cleveland, of Conn., George W. Curtis, and Parke Godwin, of New-York, will address the citizens of Southport, Conn., Friday afternoon and evening, Oct. 3.

An Editor in the Field.

At the Agricultural Fair in Westchester County, held at White Plains, last week, our neighbor A. P. Cummings, Esq., the Agricultural Editor of the New-York Observer, and one of its proprietors, carried off the first premium for the best pair of working oxen, the first for the best Durham bull, the first for the best Suffolk boar, the first for the best mare and colt, the first for the best pair of turkeys, and the best pair of hybrid ducks and the best pair of black ducks. Mr. Cummings resides in Mamaroneck, and cultivates a large farm, well stocked with the best breeds,—finding his pleasure in the peaceful pursuits of the field, though coming daily to his business in this City.

Major Hallett and General Wool are at issue on a question of veracity. The Major stands to the National Intelligencer a refutation of the General's charge against him, in reference to his conduct of skirmishes with the Indians in the Oregon war, and denies the accusation that he was on his parade ground when the enemy, so that he placed pale in unnecessarily exposed situations.

[illegible] will answer generally when his time comes, and according to the tenor of this letter, will subside again into the peaceful and inoffensive citizen he once was. It is delightful to be assured that he bears New-Hampshire no grudge for its cruel slights.

Sauce for the Goose not Sauce for the Gander.—Some of our correspondents are horrified at the bad taste of Mr. King, the Republican candidate for Governor, in alluding to his father, and think it sufficient reason for opposing the election of such an aristocrat; but, then, there are others who base their opposition to him on the ground of his being the son of his father. There is a strange lack of consistency in this; if a man may not be allowed to boast of his father, he ought not to be condemned for his father's act. It is hard for the children's teeth to be set on edge whether their fathers eat sour or sweet grapes.

From China.—We receive by way of England some interesting news from China. Particulars are to hand of the suspension at Canton of the long established American firm of Wetmore & Co. Their liabilities are stated at $624,000, and their assets at $318,000. Dr. Parker, United States Commissioner, was, at last accounts, at Foochow. An accident has happened to the United States steamer Jacinto, which caused her to put back to Whampoa for repairs. A riot is reported to have taken place on the 24th of July at Foochow in which Mr. Howard Cunningham lost his life.

Sauce for the Gander.—The Richmond Enquirer thinks it an evidence of total depravity on the part of the Republicans, that they should have selected as their candidate a man "who boasted of his birth in the aristocracy" and then turned traitor to his hereditary and his native soil." How about the Enquirer's own candidate? The South selected Mr. Buchanan solely because he was a Northern man by birth and residence, and because he was a well-known and reliable "traitor" to Northern principles. Sauce for Fremont is sauce for Buchanan.

A Settler.—Those who would like to know what Col. Fremont has to say for himself about his Cattle Operations, Mariposa Grant, &c., would do well to read his letter to Mr. Snyder, which we publish in another column. It seems that all these old slanders have done duty once before. They were originally used to keep Col. Fremont out of the U. S. Senate. They did not succeed then, however, any better than they will now. His own plain, straight-forward story sends the whole of them.

Fremont in Virginia.—The National Intelligencer professes incredulity as to the formation of a Republican Electoral ticket in Virginia. It does not know whether the Wheeling Convention was a large or a small one, or whether there was a Convention. Perhaps the Intelligencer will have the goodness to read the papers. It may gather information in that way of the actual presence of a Republican sentiment even in Virginia.

Generous and Just.—We learn by a private letter from Liverpool, that Messrs. D. & G. Mac Iver, the agents of the Cunard steamships, have refunded to those passengers who left the Arabia at Halifax, and waited for the Canada, the expenses to which they were subjected by a fortnight's delay in that port. This act reflects much credit on the managers of the Cunard ships, and we hope the Albion will not take offence because we are the first to announce it.

POLITICAL.

Eighteenth Ward Republican Meeting.

The Republicans of the Eighteenth Ward held a large and very interesting meeting in the Lecture Room of Demill's Dispensary last evening. The meeting was organized by the appointment of Judge Cole President, and a number of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries. Before the speaking commenced, a gentleman arose and stated that he had that day been informed by a merchant of this City that he had just returned from Washington, and that while there, during a conversation with the Secretary of State, he (Mr. Marcy) gave it as his deliberate opinion that the State of New-York had gone to the devil, politically. Mr. Marcy's opinion was received with considerable applause; on the conclusion of which Mr. William H. Fry was called upon to address the meeting. After some appropriate introductory remarks Mr. Fry quoted from the Democratic American and Republican platforms, exposing their strong points of difference, and commenting upon each as they deserved. It required but little time to show that the Republican platform is the only one prominently before the people that is in opposition to the extension of Slavery, in favor of free labor, and careful of the best interests of the laboring man. But during the brief period which he occupied in the consideration of that branch of his subject, he said more good things in an admirable way than are often uttered during hours of speaking.

After Mr. Fry, a Glee Club came forward and sang a good Republican song. Then a series of well-written Republican resolutions were read and adopted; and when it was past 10 o'clock, the audience was still listening with profound attention to other Republican speakers.

For Corporation Council.

The Democratic Nominating Convention met last evening at Tammany Hall, to select a nominee for Corporation Council, in place of Lorenzo B. Shepard, deceased, but were unable to agree upon a choice. The last ballot stood thus:

Busted	42	Delevan	19
Sickles	33

There were also some scattering votes.

Nomination for Councilman.

Mr. Bulkey was, last night, nominated for Councilman for the Second Ward, by the Democratic Convention which met at Montgomery's, in Beekman-street.

Gov. Cleveland, of Conn., George W. Curtis, and Parke Godwin, of New-York, will address the citizens of Southport, Conn., Friday afternoon and evening, Oct. 3.

[illegible] Academy of Music.—Mr. Max Maretzek [illegible] Opera in New-York. Inasmuch as Maretzek refuses to pay $24,000 per season, and give two hundred and fifty of the best seats in the house by way of bonus, he has declined to take the lease, and his present tenure expires to-night, after which the house will be closed until some ambitious manager with feeble finances shall rush into the chasm, and perish in the "cold shade of aristocracy."

Mr. Maretzek has been a good and enterprising manager, and his claims should be remembered to-night. The last and greatest novelty ever produced at this house—the Stella di Nord—will be played for the final time. It is the chef d'œuvre of the composer, and has the merits of a dozen ordinary operas. The first act alone is worth a repertoire.

The Copyright Law Infringed.

Threatened.—It is rumored that Mr. Boucicault's wife in Green this week, and commenced proceedings under the Dramatic Copyright Law against J. Murdoch, F. A. Murdoch, E. B. Williams, and F. Mathews, managers of the Howard Athenæum. The offence complained of in two consecutive representations at that house of "Rose, or the Career of an Actress," a literal copy of his play of "Violet, or the Life of an Actress," with the sole change of the title of the drama and the names of the characters. The play, though an excellent one, is merely a compilation, and we hear that Mr. Chapman, who produced it, agreed to back the managers of the Howard in case of a prosecution. We hear that Mr. Kimball, of the Museum, has purchased the right to the Boston representation of Boucicault's copyrighted adaptation of "Dred."

Bowery Theatre.—An ingenious but somewhat long adaptation of Mrs. Stowe's new novel "Dred" was produced here last night. It is dramatized by Mr. Boucicault, a gentleman who brings vast experience and tact to such tasks. In the present instance he has been somewhat hurried, and the dialogue is loosely threaded together. It requires much shortening before it will come out sharply and graphically. When the process of excision has been properly applied, it will, we think, prove an exciting and popular drama. It has been placed on the stage in an exceedingly creditable manner, and is most respectably acted. The exception to the latter rule was the person who impersonated the hero "Dred," a gentleman who, we venture to say, exhibited more studied defects and horrid conventionalisms than have ever before been witnessed in one performance. Not to speak too strongly, he was abominably bad, in spite of a good voice and a gallant bearing.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Quarantined, but Resigned.

Dr. Trustedee, our Health Officer, gave a lunch to sundry of his friends on Saturday, of the order which has so often distinguished his hospitality. The solid materials for a thorough palatal gratification were abundant, as did well expect who remember that there are several fine fruit orchards and magnificent gardens somewhat eastward of Quarantine, and that few boats come up from that quarter without saluting the yellow flag. The members of the Board of Health and of the Commissioners of Emigration and distinguished outsiders helped make up the company. When everybody had eaten his fill, and had settled down according to his peculiar taste, Ald. Purdy, "the war-horse of Tammany," proposed the Doctor's health in a speech so doubled with eulogies that we thought he was certainly going to name him Grand Sachem, vice the late Mr. Sawyer, deceased. Dr. Trustedee responded with affecting modesty. President Barker for the Aldermen, and President Pinckney for the Councilmen, and Dr. Milles for the Board of Health, spoke of the remarkable harmony that had characterized the proceedings of the Board; of the value of Quarantine, as demonstrated this season past all question; of the Health Officer's unflinching firmness in executing every order of the Board, to which they attributed, in a large degree, the City's unexpected immunity from yellow fever. Dr. Milles threw out the suggestion that Quarantine be abandoned for the hot season, and so far as vessels from the West Indies are concerned, to Sandy Hook; but for other seasons, and for vessels from other ports, that the present arrangement be continued. Dr. Harcourt, and Dr. ——— (of Southfield,) urged the necessity of a removal. Dr. Harris responded to a toast invoking perpetual health upon himself and staff. Commissioner Crafts reminded the Common Councilmen that the Commissioners's bill ought to pass, while the majority, headed by a stock, cunning physician, spent the time that others talked in stowing away the rare dessert. It was a capital time, and Dr. Rockwell told his accustomed story.

The Harbor Commissioners.

The Corps of Topographical Engineers engaged in making soundings and surveys in Harlem River, and about Hell-Gate, under direction of the Harbor Commissioners, have nearly completed their labors. They have made some 500,000 soundings with the careful notation of the shifting of the different channels and shoals, besides giving the precise mean low water mark of all the various rocks and impediments to navigation to be found here. A few more days will complete the entire work, which, with the recent termination of the soundings and surveys about the lower bay, concludes the surveys connected immediately with the waters about New-York City.

To-day, General Totten, Professor Bache, and Professor Davies meet as an advisory Board, with the Harbor Commissioners, relative to establishing an exterior water line about Brooklyn, from the Navy Yard to Gowanus Bay. They will be in session the whole week. It is proposed to hear statements from the residents and property owners in Brooklyn, concerning the application for a new street along the East River shore. The city of Brooklyn has a large interest in the laying out of such a street. For lack of it, her commerce has languished long. This portion of the duties delegated to the Commissioners completed, they will proceed at once to make their report for early presentation to the next Legislature.

A sharp compositor of a brilliant daily paper in this town, attempting lately to set up a familiar line of poetry, made it read thus: "Death bones a shining mark."

The carmen did not turn out to make their demonstration for Fillmore, because it rained, last night. Doubtless they will advertise it for the first fair night.

Sudden Death.

Mr. Henry Hoxie, brother-in-law of Dr. Mathews, and a well-known citizen, while passing through Chatham-street at 8¼ o'clock last night fell suddenly to the sidewalk, and expired in a few moments afterwards in the house of Mr. M. Gomersall, into which he was taken. Mr. Hoxie was advanced in years. An inquest upon the body will be held to-day.

October Temperature.

It is a matter of great interest to look forward to that period in the coming month of October when a frost temperature may reasonably be expected.

I have made up the following statement of the records of the temperature of the month of October in sixty-seven consecutive years, viz: from 1789 to 1855 inclusive, the last of which are by observations made and recorded hourly, the remaining sixty-seven years are by observations made thrice daily. The former gives the lowest temperature during the twenty-four hours, the latter only of the several observations made daily.

Of the hourly observations the following are the results:

1846—32° on 19th Oct.	1851—32° on 27th Oct.
1847—32° on 15th Oct.	1852—32° on 17th Oct.
1849—Not till Nov. 2.	1853—32° on 25th Oct.
1849—32° on 31st Oct.	1854—32° on 19th Oct.
1850—31° on 6th Oct.	1855—32° on 12th Oct.

Of the fifty-seven years from 1789 to 1845 inclusive, twenty-two years the temperature did not fall below 32°, thirty-six degrees, in the month of October, viz: 1796, 1801, 1806, 1808, 1807, 1809, 1804, 1805, 1814, 1808, 1802, 1804, 1805, 1808, 1801, 1803, 1794, 1793, 1791, 1790, and 1789. In the remaining thirty-five years, only five had a temperature as low as 32° before the middle of October, nine years between the middle and the 20th and the remaining years between the 20th and the 31st.

The newspaper prognostics speak of two kinds of frost, a black frost and a white frost; a black frost means low, and forms at 32° of Fahrenheit, when the North wind blows, and from 28° down to 18° when the East wind prevails.

White frost occurs at different temperatures in different seasons of the year. In Winter, it is frequent Pastime.

An interesting game of Cricket came off on Saturday, at the Brooklyn Cricket Grounds, between the Brooklyn and the New-Brighton Clubs, the latter coming off victorious, having six wickets to spare. Last year the Brooklyn players beat the New-Brighton Club on their ground, at New-Brighton, with [illegible] of wickets to spare. This year the New-Brighton players [illegible] to Billy White" [illegible] proved too much for the Brooklyn players. The score stood as follows: Brooklyn, 1st innings, 61; 2d do; total, 109. New-Brighton, 1st innings, 91; 2d, 64, and only four wickets down.

Letter from the President.

The officers and members of the New-Hampshire State Agricultural Society invited the President to visit Concord as their guest during the present week in October, to which the following reply was received:

"Washington, Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1856.

My Dear Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 6th inst., [illegible] in behalf of the officers and members of the New-Hampshire State Agricultural Society, to visit Concord on the city of my residence, and to receive me as the guest of the Society, on the occasion of the approaching Fair.

You are aware of the interest with which I have regarded this association for the promotion of science and art as applicable to agriculture; and nothing, when I expect soon to become a farmer, and to devote the residue of my days practically to agriculture, would gratify me more than a visit to your State, particularly within our commodious and well adapted hall, nor, I believe to the most attractive and beautiful State, it is very natural that my interest should be more than ordinarily earnest and practical. But, after the absence of more than three years from my native soil, you may be sure that the great pleasure which I should derive from an acceptance of your invitation, would result from the opportunity of meeting, under agreeable circumstances, many personal friends from every County in the State.

My personal and private interests have for many months required my presence in New-Hampshire, and I shall, if I can do so consistently with other duties of duty, visit the North during the present Autumn. The time, however, of my absence from the Seat of Government cannot now be indicated, as it must depend upon circumstances entirely independent of my own inclination or convenience.

I beg you to present to the officers and members of the Society my grateful acknowledgments for the kindness, and [illegible] very agreeable manner in which [illegible] been communicated. With much respect, your obedient servant, FRANKLIN PIERCE.

Jas. O. Adams, Esq., Secretary of the New-Hampshire State Agricultural Society, Manchester, N. H."

BUSINESS NOTICES.

TO CONSUMERS OF GAS.

As the season is at hand when GAS is a large item of expenditure, the New-York Gas Regulator Co. beg to call the attention of consumers to its "Kinder Gas Regulator," of which there are now in this City [illegible] some four thousand in successful operation, saving to the consumer from 20 to 25 per cent. This result comes of the use of the Regulator, as it perfectly governs the conditions in the street, and delivers the Gas throughout the house at a uniform pressure, independently of the number of burners in use at the moment, of course preventing any blowing. This given or uniform pressure under which the gas is delivered, necessarily doubles the light and improves its quality, making the flame more like that of sperm or wax. Another important consideration is that no to no consumed gas escapes the injurious effects to health from this cause is avoided, as well as injury to ceilings and paintings.

The operation and utility of the Regulator, with satisfactory references and certificates, can be seen at its office, No. 280 Broadway.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—TWO FINE COUNTRY PLACES CHEAP—A beautiful country residence at Stamford, Conn., contains 21 acres; fine improvements; delightfully situated near the Railroad Depôt and the village. Price of the whole property, $35,000, worth at least $50,000. Half can remain on bond and mortgage at 6 per cent per annum. Also a fine country residence at Saybrook, Conn., at the mouth of the Connecticut River, splendidly located on the bay and river, with fine view of the Sound. The land is in a high state of cultivation. Price, $10,000 cash—worth $20,000. Stamford and Saybrook are two of the healthiest locations in the United States, with the best of society, churches, schools, bathing, fishing, &c. Both of these farms contain building sites, which will be sold separate if desired. For further particulars, inquire of S. P. TOWNSEND, No. 82 Nassau-st.

FOR SALE—62 ACRES OF LAND BELONGING to the estate of ELIAS BEARDSLEY, pleasantly situated in Oxford, Conn., on the stage route from Seymour to Woodbury, 3½ miles from Seymour by Naugatuck R. R.; with a large convenient house and out-buildings, all in good condition. It contains wood, plow, meadow land, and a young orchard of choice fruit. It is advantageously located for a Boarding School, having been used for that purpose for a number of years. For particulars inquire of M. S. MUNN, on the premises.
